

JOHNS MANVILLE

DATA SUBJECT RIGHTS REQUEST POLICY

Under European data protection and privacy laws, individuals have certain rights in relation to their personal information, including the right to understand how Johns Manville and its affiliates and subsidiaries (collectively, the “Company”) use any personal information which they collect about them. This Policy explains how the Company will deal with an individual's request to exercise each of their rights (each a “Rights Request”).

Personal Information

Personal information is information which relates to an individual, who can be identified either directly by that information or in combination with other information held or easily accessible by the Company.

Personal information includes, among other things, names, email addresses, images of the individual, employee numbers, bank details and opinions about that individual stated by others, in other words it is information about an individual whether their name is used or not, so long as it is clear that it is about that individual.

Personal information includes expressions of opinion or intended actions which relates to that individual. The definition also states that there must be an element of 'biographical significance' for the individual, and more than a casual connection between the individual and a matter/event. For example, where an individual is simply referred to as having attended a meeting, or is the author of an email, the meeting minutes and content of the email will not be personal information unless those minutes or content have the individual as their subject matter, but the fact that the individual attended the meeting or sent the email would be personal information about the individual.

Rights of Individuals

Under the EU's General Data Protection Regulation (“GDPR”), individuals whose personal information is collected and/or used in Europe¹ have the following rights over their personal information which is collected, stored and used by the Company:

- (a) the right of access to personal information;
- (b) the right to rectification of personal information;
- (c) the right to erasure of their personal information;
- (d) the right to 'data portability';
- (e) the right to restrict the Company's processing of their personal information; and
- (f) the right to object to the Company's processing of their personal information.

Even if personal information is collected and used by a company located outside Europe, individuals will benefit from these rights over their personal information.

¹ [In these guidelines Europe means the EEA plus Switzerland.]

Submitting Rights Requests

Individuals wishing to exercise any of their rights listed above should submit a request (each a "Rights Request") and are encouraged to use the forms attached to this Policy as Appendix A to this Policy. Individuals other than current Company employees submitting Rights Requests must also submit proof of identity.

Individuals should submit Rights Requests to the following Company email address:

Company's Response

The Company will respond to all Rights Requests in a documented, consistent and timely manner in a way that complies with applicable data protection and privacy laws. The Company may collect, store and use personal information in a number of different European countries, and there may be slight differences in the law relating to Rights Requests across these countries. In addition to complying with the requirements of the GDPR, the Company will comply with country-specific data protection laws.

All Company employees receiving Rights Requests are required to comply with this Policy and any Company procedures and processes for replying to Rights Requests. As with all Company policies, violation of this Policy and/or applicable procedures will subject employees to discipline, which may include termination of employment.

Questions regarding this Global Data Privacy Policy should be directed to the Vice President and General Counsel, Legal and Risk Management.
